TRADITIONAL CORNISH PASTIES

The invention of pasties came out of necessity. The grubby conditions of mining and farming called out for a practical eating design, and thus the mighty 'crimping' came to fame! Traditionally the pasty would be held with dirty hands on the crimped edges. The hearty Cornishmen would eat the nutritious centers, and then discard the 'crimps' – ingenious! Times have moved on and we whole-heartedly advise you to eat the entire pasty - crimping and all - truly a taste of the history and heritage of Cornwall!
